

BENCHMARKING IN THE TREATMENT OF DEPRESSION

Join us at the 2007 ASHP Midyear Clinical Meeting

After participating in this breakfast symposium, pharmacists and pharmacy technicians will be able to:

- Identify the psychiatric disorders/ categories that are prevalent in the federal system today and discuss their impact on the overall federal health care system.
- Define what benchmarking is, how it can be utilized, and the impact that it can have, especially in treating depression.
- Review the epidemiology, pathophysiology, clinical manifestations, and diagnosis of depression.
- Discuss medication therapy involved in the treatment of depression, how benchmarking can be incorporated in treatment decisions, and how the federal pharmacist can have an impact.
- Identify counseling strategies that the federal pharmacist can utilize to optimize outcomes in patients suffering from depression or other mental health issues (e.g., anxiety).
